Welcome, kind machinist,
to the second instalment
of YAM's Magazine. This issue primarily revolves
around our experience
maintaining the website
after its official launch
online. We've had countless bugs, seemingly evermore to eventually fix,
and while we've been progressing, it has been at a rate slower than we initially anticipated.

We intended to kick
start our dedicated blog
page as well as our featured creator page early
on, but our itty bitty
baby home page decided she would serve our
errors with some ferali-
ty and, in turn, demand
our undivided attention. When we had some time to spare, we wholly focused our efforts on developing User's Playground, and made an entirely new navigation button for our radio, MechNet (that we finally got around to
wiring up the new user interface for).

Meet The Team

What have we been up to?

Trespassed a few industrial areas, mainly for scrap metal (intended for sculpture pieces); took pics of haunted shit along the way.

Thrifted for some Halloween-esque decorations - adopted a scarecrow for the garage, nicknamed him Webber (because he was covered in cobwebs).

Scavenged for a suitable interface to reintegrate Mechnet utilities; reinforced the radio tower's questionable infrastructure.

Kiri's radio tower is sounding crisp! It took a lot of work to get it connected. Getting the updated UI implemented was a huge achievement (thanks 2 yeebus & kiri!) I love the radio as if it was my own child...

Here's our collective favorite post from this year (technically from last year). It just represents so much to us. Yam's ui first coming together... It was the start of something great. -Yeebus

"I'm somewhere cold."

YouAreMachines.com/#id-96

Sometimes I feel like some egomaniac posting pictures of myself, but then again, they make me happy. So who cares? Something about this image in particular though, the composition, the mental space I fall into, I just float off somewhere peaceful. -Kiri

"Looklooklook"

YouAreMachines.com/#id-51

One of the better posts I've made this year. I found this wrecked announcement board in a train station and added some Yam themed elements. Take a look on Yam and maybe zoom in... -Yeebus

"YAM OST - Am I Real?"

YouAreMachines.com/#id-70

This was the third YAM theme and my favorite so far! I plan on making more but I am incredibly proud of the video and music. Am I Real? Contributing to our unique sound and style is a blessing! -Asaklair yeebus: Welcome Anthony! Good to see ya! So Anthony, tell us a little bit about yourself and what you do.

Anthony: [...] I guess currently I'm most known for my YouTube channel 'Reject Convenience', where I tell people that I use a dumb phone and you should read privacy policies. That's been a blast to do. I've been so thrilled with the response to it. Of course, I've had the channel for what, 12 years now? So it obviously didn't always exist in that state. I've always just kind of found a lot of joy in just making stuff [...] I mean, I think the first thing that got me like into editing video was watching the movie Scott Pilgrim versus the World when I was in high school and I was like, How did they do all of these visual effects? And so I downloaded a pirated version of After Effects, and I started watching free YouTube videos on how to use it.

yeebus (1.2647 nanoseconds ago) reply?

What led you to make more informative videos? Are there any inspirational figures?

reject convenience (0.976 nanoseconds ago) reply?

I'm going to be honest. I don't, like, completely, know. [...] My mom always told me that I would be a great teacher, and I never, like, totally grasped what she was talking about because I was I was so bad at school. [...] I've mostly worked in like tech support, but it was something that like I just naturally fell into because I had always been tinkering with computers as a kid. [...] But the thing that, like, I grasped on to the most in early tech support work was making sure that the people that you're working with don't feel dumb about what they've done. It's something that I have seen countless times, fumbled. And I get it, you know? It's hard to learn that sometimes when you're so caught up in understanding how this technology works, It's really easy to oversee why other people don't understand it.

yeebus (0.25 picoseconds ago) reply?

A bit of a deeper question for you. [...] What do you think it means to be real?

reject convenience (0.0127 picoseconds ago) reply?

This is a really fun question for me specifically. I've been relatively open about this. I don't think I've ever officially said it on my channel though, but I have schizoaffective disorder and so I have in the past struggled quite a bit with the concept of reality. It's interesting because I think I actually have a unique perspective because of all of the years and years of therapy. [...] I vividly remember one therapy session. It was snowing and I was kind of experiencing some of the detachment from reality stuff. And he said, "hey, let's go in a walk," (my therapist) and we get to a certain point and he picks up a snowball and he says, "hold out your hands," I said, "okay," [he] puts it in my hands and squeezes my hands together and it starts to hurt, right? And he said, "does this feel real?" Like, it was exactly what I needed to hear. And I fully recognize that that's insane for some people. But it was exactly. We had been working together for a while and he knew that that would work. And it was- it clicked so good in my brain, of like, life is the experience, you know? And if I'm experiencing it, it is real, right? And I think that that even has fallen true and how we feel about things. If you are feeling it, your feelings are real, right?

Who is Crisp?

Hello, my name is Crisp. I am 26 years young. I make music for a lot of video games, like Elation For The Wonderbox 6000, Seudoregalia, Funi Raccoon game, Mamas Sleeping Angels, Metamorphosis, [Pigface]... I make music for a lot of games. That's my full-time job and I love it. It's my favorite thing I've ever done in my entire life.

Crisp Interview
Musician for video games and media

When did you start making music?

I've always had an interest in music from when I was really young, but I didn't really take it seriously. It was kind of more like toys to me. My dad always kind of had a creative bone in his body, but he never really committed to, like actually learning anything. So, I was like "I want to try something" so my dad taught me how to beatbox when I was young. And I was like, this is fun. I'm really good at beatboxing now.

Do you have any advice for aspiring game music composers?

You're not gonna do this by yourself. It's hard. I did this by myself for a very long time. I started making friends with people and realized I do not actually have to be alone. The more people I meet, the more projects I get brought onto, I'm just like, okay, we're actually all in this together. So go out there, make some friends, post that demo reel. You never know what's around the corner. You will get your own Pseudoregalia.

MY PHILOSOPHY ON OUR WORLDS COLLIDING

THOUGHTS FROM KIRI

Theory of self

I've been experiencing 'my' reality, haven't I? I discovered this other internet thing and it was a serious deal. I mean, dude, I didn't even let my friends in on how deep it was initially.

There was this completely different philosophy to how people used this internet, how it worked and clicked, not to mention how active and, I don't know, bright it all was. The internet I found on that machine wasn't a single-track; it wasn't even multiple. It was this washed-up symphony echoing in this desultory, but somehow distinguishable manner. It had this life and energy I don't think I've ever seen before. I'm not much the jealous type, I promise you that ;) but there's this almost immediate understanding I got: there was a gap, a stagnation, between the meekness of my reality and the cacophony of theirs.

The Quality or state of being 'real'

I've been colloquially bequeathing that reality as the 'dirt palace' in passing. Now that I'm thinking about it, though, it's not the most... Venerable title I could have chosen. I swear it was the first thing that came to mind when the question was initially brought up; but the name probably had more to do with the fact that I didn't want to admit its likelihood of being a reality, rather than a shoddy sci-fi reenactment. I suppose if I was going to start making a fuss about 'my' reality, I would have to recognize this other reality in its own right, sooner or later; especially given that I can now actualize the lives of the friends I've made through this digital window- Asakclair and Yeebus.

All this to say, I think the term 'alternate reality' actually suggests an inherent connection produced as the mutual consequences of one another's existence. With my reality and this other, sure, undeniable overlaps exist, but I don't think that it's quite enough evidence to prove that they're two sides of the same coin: versions of the same entity. Personally, I'm a little partial to something like 'adjacent reality'. Like they're both mutually entwined, only by their unique independence.

I've never liked the term 'alternate reality'. It's a little myopic. In terms of 'my' reality- this reality- cue the nonsensical comparisons. You may as well throw away all the 'reality' of it at that point :p Some domineering proclamation about how other existences are mere parallels of your own; it's sooooo self centric, so dramatic. As if you could boil down any world to a phantom spin-off. To say that the only way to experience my reality is through some weird, tinted looking-glass- pfft, it's like asking a fish in another glass bowl if it can see the tank. It's not that simple.
